A remarkable instance of American enterprise is recorded from Troy, New York State. Early one morning a fire broke out in the nickle plating and mounting departments of a stove factory, involving a loss of about $50,000; but while the firemen were still doing their best to save property, the firm were arranging the contract for the new buildings, and issuing circulars to their customers to the effect that the business would be fully resumed in two weeks. The next morning, while the laborers were busily engaged amongst the smoking ruins, the masons commenced to excavate for the new foundations, and the manufacture of the new plant has been commenced in New York. In this case, at least, there was no loss of time.

Fogg "put his foot into it" badly the other afternoon. It was rather dark in the street as he entered, but he thought that he recognised his friend Pingrey sitting in the middle; so he gave him a push, saying: "Come, move over! Do you want all the car to yourself?" It was not Pingrey. It was a stranger. Fogg stammered out an apology. "I thought," said he, "you were a gentleman—." Did you," interrupted the stranger. "Well, sir, nobody will ever mistake you for one."

The "wickedest woman in England," Jane Johnson, aged eighty-four, has been converted. She has been in Leeds prison 240 times, and nearly as many times in other gaols. She is now preaching in Hull.
